Hon. Kimberly J. Mueller

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

1 TO DEFENDANTS XAVIER BECERRA, in his official capacity as the Attorney General
2 of the State of California, LILIA GARCIA BROWER, in her official capacity as the Labor 3 Commissioner of the State of California, JULIA A. SU, in her official capacity as the Secretary of 4 the California Labor and Workforce Development Agency, and KEVIN KISH, in his official 5 capacity as Director of the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (collectively, 6 “Defendants”), AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:
7

8 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE THAT, on January 10, 2020, before the Honorable Kimberly J.
9 Mueller, at the Robert T. Matsui United States Courthouse, 501 I Street, Sacramento, CA, 10 Courtroom 3, 15th Floor, Plaintiffs the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America 11 (the “U.S. Chamber”), the California Chamber of Commerce (the “CalChamber”), the National 12 Retail Federation (“NRF”), the California Retailers Association (“CRA”), the National 13 Association of Security Companies (“NASCO”), the Home Care Association of America
14 (“HCAOA”), and the California Association For Health Services At Home (“CAHSAH”)
15 (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) will and hereby do make the following motion.
16

17 Plaintiffs respectfully move this Court for a preliminary injunction prohibiting Defendants 18 from enforcing Assembly Bill 51, or AB 51 pending the completion of judicial review. This 19 motion is made pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65, on the grounds that Plaintiffs are 20 likely to prevail on the merits of their claims, they will suffer irreparable injury if an injunction is 21 not granted, and the balance of equities and consideration of the public interest weigh in favor of 22 granting an injunction. This motion is based on Plaintiffs’ Complaint, the memorandum of law in 23 support of the motion, the Declaration of Brian Maas, and any such testimony, evidence, or 24 argument that may be submitted to the Court.

INTRODUCTION

2 Congress enacted the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 1-16 (“FAA”) to “promote 3 arbitration.” AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 345 (2011). Acknowledging that 4 purpose, the Supreme Court has repeatedly held that the FAA preempts state substantive or 5 procedural rules that forbid or undermine agreements to arbitrate in the labor and employment 6 context or in any other setting within the federal statute’s scope.

7 The State of California nonetheless recently enacted a law—Assembly Bill 51, or AB 51—8 that purports to prohibit businesses and workers from agreeing to arbitrate an exceptionally broad 9 range of labor and employment discrimination claims until after those claims arise. AB 51 even 10 makes it a crime for businesses to exercise their federally protected rights to present workers with 11 agreements to arbitrate those claims.

12 Unless this Court enjoins the enforcement of AB 51 now, this law—unconstitutional under 13 the Supremacy Clause—will take effect on January 1, 2020. At that time, AB 51 will forbid 14 businesses from asking their workers to agree, as a condition of employment or any employment-15 related benefits, to waive any “right, forum, or procedure” provided by the California Fair Housing 16 and Employment Act (“FEHA”) or by the entire California Labor Code. Because FEHA and the 17 Labor Code provide for the right to file complaints in court—the waiver of which is an inherent 18 characteristic of arbitration—this language purports to prohibit businesses from entering into 19 arbitration agreements with workers. And AB 51 treats an arbitration agreement as mandatory—20 and thus unlawful—even if a worker has the opportunity to opt out of it.

21 Numerous members of Plaintiffs the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of 22 America (the “U.S. Chamber”), the California Chamber of Commerce (the “CalChamber”), the 23 National Retail Federation (“NRF”), the California Retailers Association (“CRA”), the National 24 Association of Security Companies (“NASCO”), the Home Care Association of America
25 (“HCAOA”), and the California Association For Health Services At Home (“CAHSAH”)
26 (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) are businesses that operate in California and currently rely on arbitration 27 to resolve workplace-related disputes. These members and other California businesses have long 28

1 used arbitration to provide fair, quick, and efficient resolution of workplace disputes while 2 reducing the burdens to all parties of litigation in court. Some members condition employment or 3 the provision of work on an agreement to arbitrate, while others permit workers to opt out of 4 arbitration.

5 All of these companies face harsh sanctions, including criminal penalties, if they continue 6 these practices on or after January 1, 2020. And if they instead choose to comply with AB 51 7 while the Court decides this case, Plaintiffs’ members will incur substantial, unrecoverable costs.
8 Plaintiffs thus respectfully request entry of a preliminary injunction barring Defendants—the 9 Attorney General of California, the Director of the Department of Fair Employment and Housing, 10 the Secretary of the California Labor and Workforce Development Agency, and the California 11 Labor Commissioner—from enforcing AB 51 while Plaintiffs challenge its legality.

12 Plaintiffs meet the four-part test set forth in Winter v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 13 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008).

14 First, Plaintiffs are highly likely to succeed on the merits of their challenge. AB 51 is 15 preempted by the FAA and therefore invalid under the Supremacy Clause of the United States 16 Constitution. The “defining trait” of arbitration agreements is “a waiver of the right to go to court.”
17 Kindred Nursing Ctrs. Ltd. P’Ship v. Clark, 137 S. Ct. 1421, 1427 (2017). AB 51 forbids 18 agreements to waive either a judicial or an administrative forum, and subjects any business that 19 routinely includes such agreements as an element of an employment contract to both civil liability 20 and criminal penalties. By doing so, AB 51 improperly “impede[s] the ability of” employers “to 21 enter into arbitration agreements,” and therefore is preempted. Id. at 1429; see Preston v. Ferrer, 22 552 U.S. 346, 350, 358 (2008) (rejecting any “distinction between judicial and administrative 23 proceedings” for purposes of FAA preemption).

24 Some legislative materials accompanying AB 51 suggest that the new law would not be 25 preempted because it regulates the formation of arbitration agreements rather than the 26 enforceability of those agreements once formed. But the Supreme Court’s decision in Kindred 27 squarely forecloses that theory. As Justice Kagan explained for the Court, the FAA protects 28

1 against not only discriminatory rules regarding the enforcement of arbitration agreements, but also 2 rules “governing what it takes to enter into them.” Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1428. In short, AB 51 3 violates the FAA’s mandate to put arbitration agreements on an “equal footing” with other 4 contracts. Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 339.

5 Second, in the absence of preliminary relief, AB 51 will inflict irreparable harm on 6 Plaintiffs’ members. See Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. Plaintiffs’ members could not recover the 7 significant administrative expenses or the increase in dispute-resolution costs that will result if 8 they are forced to comply with AB 51 while this action is pending. Businesses and workers who 9 are forced into resolving their disputes through litigation in court—often after administrative 10 adjudication—until this action is resolved would lose the benefits of arbitration. And those 11 members who do not comply with AB 51, based on the good-faith belief that the FAA protects 12 arbitration agreements, risk unprecedented sanctions, including criminal liability.

13 Third, the balance of the equities and the public interest, factors that merge when the 14 government is a party, both weigh heavily in favor of a preliminary injunction. See Winter, 555 15 U.S. at 20, 25-26. Plaintiffs will suffer serious, irreparable harm without an injunction. In contrast, 16 Defendants would experience no harm at all if an injunction were issued. The injunction would 17 simply preserve the status quo permitting businesses and their workers to enter into arbitration 18 agreements. And Defendants have no legitimate interest in enforcing an invalid law that flies in 19 the face of the FAA’s federal policy favoring arbitration and “the Constitution’s declaration that 20 federal law is to be supreme.” Am. Trucking Associations, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles, 559 F.3d 21 1046, 1058 (9th Cir. 2009).

22 In sum, a preliminary injunction against enforcement of AB 51 is both appropriate and 23 necessary, and should be entered without delay.

24 BACKGROUND

25 A. Plaintiffs’ members rely on agreements with their workers so that all parties have 26 access to the benefits of arbitration.

27 Arbitration is a faster, simpler, cheaper, and less adversarial mode of dispute resolution as 28 compared to litigation in court. The Supreme Court has recognized “real benefits to the 1 enforcement of arbitration agreements” in the employment context. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v.

2 Adams, 532 U.S. 105, 119 (2001). For example, the Court has observed, arbitration lowers the 3 cost of dispute resolution because it is more efficient and uses simpler procedures. See 4 Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 345 (“[T]he informality of arbitral proceedings is itself desirable, 5 reducing the cost and increasing the speed of dispute resolution.”). These “simpler procedural and 6 evidentiary rules” reduce the burdens on both parties; arbitration “normally minimizes hostility 7 and is less disruptive of ongoing and future business dealings among the parties; [and] it is often 8 more flexible in regard to scheduling of times and places of hearings and discovery devices.” 9 Allied-Bruce Terminix Cos. v. Dobson, 513 U.S. 265, 280 (1995) (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 97-542, 10 at 13 (1982)).

11 “[A]llowing parties to avoid the costs of litigation” is “a benefit that may be of particular 12 importance in employment litigation, which often involves smaller sums of money than disputes 13 concerning commercial contracts.” Circuit City, 532 U.S. at 122-23. Because of these features, 14 arbitration is accessible to workers who do not have access to legal counsel. See Jason Scott 15 Johnston & Todd Zywicki, The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau’s Arbitration Study: A 16 Summary and Critique 25-26, Mercatus Working Paper, Mercatus Center at George Mason 17 University, Arlington, VA (Aug. 2015) (“hiring an attorney * * * is often unnecessary [in 18 arbitration]”). And these features make it practicable for workers to assert claims in arbitration 19 that they could not practically assert in court.

20 Empirical research confirms these conclusions. A recent study released by the U.S.
21 Chamber’s Institute for Legal Reform demonstrated that, in cases decided on the merits, employees 22 on average recovered more money in arbitration—and did so in less time than in court litigation.

28

1 Businesses, including Plaintiffs’ members with operations in California, use arbitration to 2 resolve workplace-related disputes so that the business and its employees can obtain the benefits
3 of arbitration. See Declaration of Brian Maas ¶ 6; Compl. ¶¶ 16-22. Almost all these businesses 4 either enter into predispute arbitration agreements with their workers as a condition of employment 5 or allow workers to opt out of arbitration by taking some affirmative step (such as providing the 6 company with written notice). See Maas Dec. ¶ 21. These practices ensure that businesses and 7 workers can make use of alternative dispute resolution procedures to avoid the expense and 8 complexity of traditional litigation in court. Id. ¶ 27; Compl. ¶¶ 2-7.¹

9 B. The California Legislature seeks to restrict employment arbitration practices.

10 Despite the benefits of employment arbitration, the California Legislature has repeatedly 11 tried to ban it.

12 More than thirty years ago, the Supreme Court held that the FAA preempted a California 13 Labor Code provision requiring that wage collection actions be resolve in court “without regard to 14 the existence of any private agreement to arbitrate.” Perry v. Thomas, 482 U.S. 483, 484 (1987).
15 The Court concluded that prohibiting arbitration of wage disputes was in “unmistakable conflict” 16 with the FAA, so that, “under the Supremacy Clause, the state statute must give way.” Id. at 491.

17 The Legislature later purported to vest exclusive original jurisdiction in the Labor 18 Commissioner over disputes between artists and talent agents even when the parties had agreed to 19 arbitrate. See Preston, 552 U.S. at 350-51. But the Supreme Court held that, “when parties agree 20 to arbitrate all questions arising under a contract, state laws lodging primary jurisdiction in another 21 forum, whether judicial or administrative, are superseded by the FAA.” Id. at 349-50.

22 More recently, the Legislature passed Assembly Bill 3080 (“AB 3080”) in September 23 2018, a bill that sought to prohibit arbitration as a condition of employment and contained 24 provisions almost identical to those in AB 51. See California AB 3080 (Employment 25 Discrimination: enforcement) (September 30, 2018). Former California Governor Jerry Brown 26 vetoed AB 3080, explaining that the statute “plainly violates federal law.” Governor’s Veto

27 _____
28 ¹ The harms identified by Mr. Maas are representative of the harms that many of the plaintiffs’ members will suffer as a result of AB 51.

1 Message, AB 3080 (Sept. 30, 2018), available at [http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/
2 billStatusClient.xhtml?bill_id=201720180AB3080](http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/billStatusClient.xhtml?bill_id=201720180AB3080). Governor Brown’s veto message explained 3 that AB 3080 was “based on a theory that the Act only governs the enforcement and not the initial 4 formation of arbitration agreements and therefore California is free to prevent . . . arbitration 5 agreements from being formed at the outset.” Id. But Governor Brown recognized that “[t]he 6 Supreme Court has made it explicit this approach is impermissible.” Id. (citing Kindred, 137 S.
7 Ct. at 1428); Compl. ¶ 30.

8 Disregarding the former Governor’s concerns, the California Legislature passed AB 51 a 9 year later, in September 2019. The new bill was crafted in part by the plaintiffs’ bar. See Glenn 10 Jeffers, AB51 will withstand challenges, author insists, L.A. Daily J. (Nov. 27, 2019) (quoting and 11 identifying plaintiffs’ lawyer Cliff Palefsky as “one of the law’s authors”). The Senate and 12 Assembly Floor analyses for AB 51 explained that AB 51 was designed to prohibit arbitration 13 agreements as a condition of employment. For example:

- 14 • The author of AB 51 stated that the bill is needed to address what she pejoratively 15 calls “forced arbitration.” See California AB 51 (Employment Discrimination: 16 enforcement), Reg. Sess. 2019-2020, Senate Rules Committee Analysis 3-4 (as 17 amended March 26, 2019) (Third Reading—Prepared on September 1, 2019),

- 20 • The Senate analysis states that the law is designed to combat “the specter of 21 mandatory labor law arbitration.” Id. at 5.
- 22 • The Assembly analysis likewise acknowledges that the law targets “[t]he use of 23 mandatory arbitration agreements in the employment context.” California AB 51

1 C. The Governor signs AB 51 into law.

2 Governor Newsom signed AB 51 into law on October 10, 2019. Compl. ¶ 40. AB 51 3 “applies to contracts for employment entered into, modified, or extended on or after January 1, 4 2020.” Cal. Lab. Code § 432.6(h). AB 51 will amend both California’s Labor Code (Cal. Lab.
5 Code § 1 et seq.) and FEHA (Cal. Gov’t Code § 1900 et seq.).

6 (1) AB 51’s amendment to the Labor Code.

7 California’s voluminous Labor Code creates a panoply of wage, hour, and other 8 employment-related claims. See, e.g., Cal. Lab. Code § 210 (civil penalties against employers for 9 failure to pay employee wages); id. § 246.5(c) (employee right to sick leave); id. § 98.6 (employee 10 whistleblower protections). The California Labor Commissioner, under the oversight of the 11 Secretary of the Labor and Workforce Development Agency, generally enforces the provisions of 12 the Labor Code through the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The Labor Code allows 13 individuals aggrieved by alleged violations to file complaints with the Division. Id. §§ 95; 98.
14 Parties may appeal the Labor Commissioner’s orders to superior courts. Id. § 98.2. Aggrieved 15 individuals also may directly sue employers over many Labor Code violations. See, e.g., id.
16 §§ 98.7, 203, 1194, 2698-2699.6; Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.

17 AB 51 will add Section 432.6 to the Labor Code. That section will prohibit employers 18 from requiring any employee or applicant to “waive any right, forum or procedure for a violation 19 of any provision” of FEHA or the entire Labor Code, including “the right to file and pursue a civil 20 action” in “any court,” “as a condition of employment, continued employment, or the receipt of 21 any employment-related benefit.” Cal. Lab. Code § 432.6(a).

22 Section 432.6 deems agreements that allow employees to “opt out of a waiver or take any 23 affirmative action in order to preserve their rights” to impose a condition of employment. See Cal.
24 Lab. Code § 432.6(c). That is, voluntary opt-out procedures are treated as if they provided no 25 option at all.

26 Under the Labor Code, businesses that violate these restrictions are guilty of a 27 misdemeanor (Cal. Lab. Code § 433), which is punishable by imprisonment not exceeding six 28

1 months or a fine not exceeding $1,000, or both (Cal. Lab. Code § 23). Individuals who prevail in 2 an action enforcing their rights under Section 432.6(d) will be entitled to injunctive relief and 3 attorneys' fees. Cal. Lab. Code § 432.6(d).

4 (2) AB 51's amendment to FEHA.

5 FEHA includes a variety of protections against workplace discrimination. See, e.g., Cal.
6 Gov't Code § 12945.6 (employee rights related to parental leave); id. § 12945 (rights related to 7 pregnancy, childbirth, and medical conditions); id. § 12948 (denial of civil rights as an unlawful 8 practice). The Department of Fair Employment and Housing is responsible for enforcing FEHA, 9 which directs persons "aggrieved by an alleged unlawful practice" to file complaints with the 10 Department's Director. Id. §§ 12960-12965. If, after investigation, the Director determines that a 11 complaint is valid, he must "immediately endeavor to eliminate the unlawful employment practice 12 complained of by conference, conciliation, and persuasion." Id. § 12963.7. If these measures fail, 13 the Director may bring a civil action on behalf of the person aggrieved. Id. § 12965. If the 14 Department does not bring a civil action within 150 days after the filing of a complaint—or during 15 that time decides not to bring an action—the Department will issue a right-to-sue notice to the 16 complainant, who can then bring a civil action against the employer. Id.

17 AB 51 amends FEHA by adding Section 12953, which provides that any violation of 18 Section 432.6 in the Labor Code will be an "unlawful employment practice" under FEHA, Cal.
19 Gov't Code § 12953, providing an additional and distinct administrative remedy (and a distinct 20 private right of action) for any violation of Labor Code section 432.6.

21 D. Businesses face a genuine threat of civil and criminal enforcement of AB 51.

22 Businesses that do not comply with AB 51 risk several types of enforcement actions. As 23 explained above:

- 24 • The Labor Commissioner may enforce Labor Code section 432.6 directly.
- 25 • The Director of the Department of Fair Employment and Housing may enforce 26 violations of that provision as violations of FEHA under Government Code section 27 12953.

- 1 • Workers may bring their own actions under both statutes.
- 2 • And because violations of Section 432.6, may be treated as misdemeanors,
- 3 businesses are subject to prosecution by California’s Attorney General and the
- 4 District Attorneys under his direct supervision, who are charged with enforcing
- 5 California’s criminal laws. Cal. Gov’t Code §§ 12550, 26500; Compl. ¶ 49.

6 The threat to California business is significant, real, and imminent.

7 ARGUMENT

8 The standard for issuing a preliminary injunction is well established. A party is entitled to 9 a preliminary injunction if it shows that (1) it is “likely to succeed on the merits”; (2) it is “likely 10 to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief”; (3) the balance of equities tips in 11 [its] favor”; and (4) “an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. Under the 12 Ninth Circuit’s sliding scale approach to balancing these factors, “serious questions going to the 13 merits and a balance of hardships that tips sharply towards the plaintiff can support issuance of a 14 preliminary injunction, so long as the plaintiff also shows that there is a likelihood of irreparable 15 injury and that the preliminary injunction is in the public interest.” All. For the Wild Rockies v.
16 Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131 (9th Cir. 2011).

17 Plaintiffs meet all four factors.

18 A. Plaintiffs Are Likely To Succeed On The Merits.

19 Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims because AB 51 is preempted 20 by the FAA.

21 The Supremacy Clause directs that the “laws of the United States * * * shall be the supreme 22 law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution 23 or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.” U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 2. As a consequence, 24 any state law that “conflicts with § 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act * * * violates the Supremacy 25 Clause.” Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10 (1984) (provision of California Corporations 26 Code preempted); see Preston, 552 U.S at 353 (“The FAA’s displacement of conflicting state law 27 is ‘now well-established.’”). Likewise, a state law that “stands as an obstacle to the 28

1 accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress,” as expressed in 2 federal law, is preempted and invalid. Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 352 (quoting Hines v. Davidowitz, 3 312 U.S. 52, 67 (1941)). AB 51 is preempted on both grounds.

4 The FAA “reflects an emphatic federal policy in favor of arbitral dispute resolution.” 5 Marmet Health Care Ctr., Inc. v. Brown, 565 U.S. 530, 533 (2012) (per curiam) (quotation marks 6 omitted). Section 2 of the FAA specifies that a “written provision in * * * a contract evidencing a 7 transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such 8 contract or transaction, * * * shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds 9 as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” 9 U.S.C. § 2. Under Section 2, 10 “courts must place arbitration agreements on an equal footing with other contracts, and enforce 11 them according to their terms.” Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 339; accord Lamps Plus, Inc. v. Varela, 12 139 S. Ct. 1407, 1412 (2019). Accordingly, the Supreme Court has repeatedly held that state laws 13 disfavoring arbitration are preempted.²

14 AB 51’s special restrictions on the ability of businesses to enter into arbitration agreements 15 with their workers, especially coupled with the extraordinary sanction of criminal penalties—16 restrictions and penalties that do not apply to other types of contracts—violate Section 2 of the 17 FAA. Under AB 51, any contract term may be a condition of employment except a term that 18 substitutes another dispute resolution process for litigation in court or before an administrative 19 tribunal—a standard explicitly designed to prohibit arbitration as a condition of employment. A 20 rule that “singl[es] out arbitration provisions for suspect status” in this manner “directly conflicts 21 with § 2 of the FAA.” Casarotto, 517 U.S. at 688; see also Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1426-27 (FAA 22 preempts a state-law rule that “fails to put arbitration agreements on an equal plane with other 23 contracts” and “singl[es] out those contracts for disfavored treatment”). Indeed, as noted above

24
25 ² See, e.g., Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1426 (Kentucky state-law rule requiring specific express 26 authorization in power-of-attorney before an attorney-in-fact could agree to arbitration on behalf 27 of her principal); Doctor’s Assocs., Inc. v. Casarotto, 517 U.S. 681, 687-88 (1996) (Montana 28 statute conditioning enforcement of arbitration agreements on special notice requirements); Perry, 482 U.S. at 491 (California Labor Code provision requiring judicial forum for wage collection actions); Southland, 465 U.S. at 10 (requirement that claims under California Franchise Investment Law be decided in court).

1 (at 5), the Supreme Court has specifically recognized that California Labor Code provisions that 2 disfavor arbitration are preempted. See Preston, 552 U.S. 346; Perry, 482 U.S. 483.

3 None of the arguments that were raised against preemption in the California Legislature, 4 anticipating a challenge like this one, withstand scrutiny.

5 First, Supreme Court precedent forecloses the contention that AB 51 avoids preemption 6 because “its edicts would apply equally to waiver of any dispute resolution forum or procedure.”
7 Senate Rules Committee Analysis, supra, at 6. As the Court recently reiterated, Section 2’s 8 “savings clause does not save defenses that target arbitration either by name or by more subtle 9 methods.” Epic Sys. Corp. v. Lewis, 138 S. Ct. 1612, 1622 (2018) (emphasis added). The FAA 10 preempts both any State rule that “discriminates on its face against arbitration” and any rule “that 11 covertly accomplishes the same objective by disfavoring contracts that * * * have the defining 12 features of arbitration agreements.” Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1426. Just like the preempted rule in 13 Kindred, AB 51 selects a defining feature of arbitration agreements—“a waiver of the right to go 14 to court”—and on the basis of that feature “impede[s] the ability” of employers to enter arbitration 15 agreements. Id. at 1427, 1429; see Preston, 552 U.S. at 354-59 (under same principles, holding 16 FAA preempts law requiring initial resort to administrative adjudication).

17 Restrictions such as those imposed by AB 51 that derive their meaning from the fact that 18 an agreement to arbitrate is at issue “flout the FAA’s command to place those agreements on equal 19 footing with other contracts” and are therefore preempted. Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1428. As the 20 Supreme Court recognized in Concepcion, state-law rules requiring “disposition by a jury,” 21 “judicially monitored discovery,” or application of “the Federal Rules of Evidence” are all 22 “obvious illustration[s]” of rules that would be preempted by the FAA—even if they purport to 23 apply “to ‘any’ contract.” 563 U.S. at 341-42. That is because such rules would “[i]n practice . . .
24 have a disproportionate impact on arbitration agreements” and “interfere[] with fundamental 25 attributes of arbitration.” Id. at 342, 344.

26 Simply put, states may not subject arbitration agreements, “by virtue of their defining trait, 27 to uncommon barriers.” Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1427.

1 Second, the Supreme Court’s decision in Kindred also squarely repudiates the assertion by 2 AB 51’s author that “[t]he Supreme Court has never ruled that the FAA applies in the absence of 3 a valid agreement.” Senate Rules Committee Analysis, supra, at 4. The plaintiffs in Kindred 4 argued that “the FAA has no application to contract formation issues.” 137 S. Ct. at 1428 5 (quotation marks omitted). But the Supreme Court disagreed, making clear that the FAA’s “equal-6 footing principle” applies not only to the enforcement of arbitration agreements once formed, but 7 also to “what it takes to enter into them.” Id. That clear holding prompted Governor Brown to 8 veto an earlier bill on the ground that it “plainly violat[e] federal law” because it purported to 9 avoid FAA preemption under the same rationale. See pages 5-6, supra.

10 Third, and for similar reasons, the result is not altered by the language, belatedly added to 11 AB 51, stating that the statute is not “intended to invalidate a written arbitration agreement that is 12 otherwise enforceable under the Federal Arbitration Act.” Cal. Labor Code § 432.6(f). Regardless 13 of whether an arbitration agreement governed by the FAA is valid once formed, AB 51 penalizes 14 employers—with potential criminal liability—for forming an arbitration agreement in the first 15 place. Accordingly, the effort to circumvent federal preemption in Section 432.6(f) merely 16 repackages the rationale foreclosed by Kindred—that a State-law rule “falls outside the purview 17 of the FAA” so long as it “regulates employer behavior prior to an agreement being reached.” 18 Senate Floor Analysis, supra, at 4-5. In practical consequence, the Legislature’s position “would 19 make it trivially easy for States to undermine the Act—indeed, to wholly defeat it.” Kindred, 137 20 S. Ct. at 1428. After all, the obvious and intended result of the special barriers AB 51 imposes on 21 the formation of arbitration agreements, backed by criminal sanctions, is to undermine the FAA’s 22 purpose “to promote arbitration” because it plainly will deter businesses from entering into 23 arbitration agreements. Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 345.

24 In the alternative, the text of Cal. Labor Code § 432.6(f) should be interpreted on its own 25 terms to preclude application of the statute to any arbitration agreement governed by the FAA.
26 Section 432.6(f) purports not to “invalidate” arbitration agreements governed by the FAA. But 27 again, as the U.S. Supreme Court explained in Kindred, the “validity” of arbitration agreements 28

1 includes “their initial validity—that is, * * * what it takes to enter into them.” 137 S. Ct. at 1428 2 (quotation marks and alterations omitted). Accordingly, Section 432.6(f) precludes enforcing the 3 other provisions of AB 51 against any employer that enters into arbitration agreements governed 4 by the FAA. Declaring it unlawful to enter into such agreements—and subjecting the employer to 5 liability and potential criminal and civil penalties—“invalidates” those agreements by foreclosing 6 a previously permissible means of “what it takes to enter into them.” That is precisely what the 7 FAA prohibits.

8 In short, Plaintiffs are likely to prevail on their claim that AB 51 violates federal law.

9 B. Plaintiffs Will Suffer Imminent Irreparable Harm In The Absence Of A 10 Preliminary Injunction.

11 If AB 51 were allowed to go into effect as scheduled on January 1, 2020, Plaintiffs and 12 their members would suffer irreparable harm.

13 Many of Plaintiffs’ members currently enter into arbitration agreements with workers.
14 They do so as a requirement for entering into a working relationship. These standard practices 15 allow businesses and workers to obtain the benefits of an arbitral forum to resolve workplace-16 related disputes expeditiously and fairly. And businesses operating in California (and elsewhere 17 in the United States) expect that they will be able to enter into enforceable arbitration agreements—18 because of the FAA’s protection of the enforceability of those agreements—and therefore 19 anticipate lower legal costs and more efficient dispute resolution procedures. See Maas Decl. ¶¶ 6-20 7, 21-22.

21 In the absence of a preliminary injunction, Plaintiffs’ members will suffer significant harms 22 that cannot be corrected once inflicted, no matter how they respond to AB 51.

23 On the one hand, if Plaintiffs’ members refuse to comply with AB 51 while this litigation 24 is pending because they believe that the law is invalid, they risk criminal and civil penalties and 25 lawsuits. For starters, Labor Code section 433 exposes businesses to a real risk of criminal 26 prosecution. “[T]he threat of state prosecution for crimes that conflict with federal law” amounts 27 to irreparable harm. Ga. Latino Alliance for Human Rights v. Governor of Ga, 691 F.3d 1250, 28 1269 (11th Cir. 2012). The Ninth Circuit affirmed the entry of a preliminary injunction in a case

1 challenging as preempted a state statute, like this one, that included criminal penalties, explaining 2 that the “threat of prosecution under the [challenged] statute” establishes irreparable harm. Valle
3 del Sol Inc. v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013); see also Maas Dec. ¶¶ 23-25.

4 Moreover, civil investigations and enforcement actions under AB 51 are especially likely.
5 Both the Labor Code and FEHA allow employees to file a complaints with the enforcement 6 agencies. The Department of Fair Employment and Housing vigorously enforces FEHA, 7 recording 43,208 filed cases related to employment actions in 2010 alone. Cal. Dep’t of Fair 8 Employment and Housing, Employment Filed Cases: Count of Alleged Acts (December 22, 2011), 9 https://www.dfeh.ca.gov/wp-content/uploads/sites/32/2017/06/CY_01-12_Cases_Filed_by_Act-
10 Emp.pdf. And the California Labor Commissioner robustly enforces the Labor Code, regularly 11 taking enforcement actions against employers. See, e.g., Press Release Number: 2019-83, State of 12 California Department of Industrial Relations, California Labor Commissioner’s Office Cites 13 Inventory Company, Grocers More than $1.6 Million for Wage Theft Violations.

14 On the other hand, if California businesses are coerced into compliance by the threat of 15 criminal and civil penalties, they will suffer other irreparable injuries. First, these businesses will 16 have to forgo their federally protected rights to enter into predispute arbitration agreements with 17 their workers, throughout the pendency of the litigation. That will require them to incur immediate 18 administrative costs to redraft their contracts to omit arbitration provisions.

19 Indeed, the only practical approach for employers to ensure compliance with AB 51 is to 20 cease entering into predispute arbitration agreements with their employees. See Maas Dec. ¶¶ 26-21 30. The California Legislature declared that AB 51 purports not to affect “voluntary” arbitration 22 agreements (AB 51 § 1(b)), but the statute does not define that term or what it means for an 23 arbitration agreement to be a “condition of employment, continued employment, or receipt of any 24 employment-related benefit” and therefore prohibited (Cal. Labor Code § 432.6(a)). Accordingly, 25 the risk that a court or other decisionmaker will conclude that a contract formation process is not 26 sufficiently “voluntary”—subjecting the employer to potential criminal and civil penalties—will 27 lead employers simply to stop offering arbitration agreements to their employees. See Maas Dec.

28

1 ¶¶ 17, 29.

2 This concern is hardly hypothetical. Anyone who executes an arbitration agreement could 3 argue that the process was not sufficiently “voluntary.” And anyone who does not execute an 4 arbitration agreement could later claim that any adverse employment action against them was 5 “retaliat[ion]” for “the refusal to consent” to arbitration, Cal. Labor Code § 432.6(b), subjecting 6 employers to litigation and significant potential liability. Indeed, California courts have long 7 viewed the voluntariness of employment arbitration agreements with suspicion, treating any 8 “nonnegotiable contract of adhesion in the employment context [a]s procedurally unconscionable.” 9 Ajamian v. CantorCO2e, LP, 203 Cal. App. 4th 771, 796 (2012) (citing Armendariz v. Found.
10 Health Psychcare Servs., Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 83, 115 (2000)). The California Supreme Court recently 11 reaffirmed its view that the presentation of an arbitration agreement to an employee or applicant 12 is inherently oppressive, so that, “[i]n both the prehiring and posthiring settings, courts must be 13 ‘particularly attuned’ to the danger of oppression or overreaching.” OTO, LLC v. Kho, 8 Cal. 5th 14 111, 127 (2019) (quoting Armendariz, 24 Cal. 4th at 115).

15 Second, these changes will result in fewer arbitration agreements being formed, and more 16 disputes being channeled into judicial and administrative, rather than arbitral, forums. Plaintiffs’ 17 members would be deprived of the benefits and cost savings of arbitration whenever disputes arise 18 and must be resolved in the slower and more expensive court system, sometimes with a protracted 19 administrative proceeding as a prelude. And Plaintiffs’ members are likely to experience a spike 20 in the filing of meritless lawsuits, as some members of the plaintiffs’ bar may try to leverage the 21 sudden increase in employers’ defense costs to obtain windfall settlements for baseless claims that 22 would never have been filed in arbitration. Maas Dec. ¶ 32.

23 Third, were AB 51 to be invalidated later, Plaintiffs’ members could not undo the 24 consequences of changes they had made in an effort to comply with AB 51. See Maas Dec. ¶ 34.
25 Disputes that arise during the pendency of this action involving workers who have not agreed to 26 arbitration would already have been diverted into the judicial system. See Maas Dec. ¶ 35. And 27 some workers will no longer be working for the same business at the conclusion of the litigation, 28

1 making it too late to change the parties’ legal relationship. See Maas Dec. ¶ 36.

2 None of these costs can be recovered with monetary damages at the conclusion of the suit, 3 because they would be barred by sovereign immunity. See, e.g., Cal. Pharmacists Ass’n v.
4 Maxwell-Jolly, 563 F.3d 847, 852 (9th Cir. 2009), vacated on other grounds by Douglas v. Indep.
5 Living Ctr. of S. Cal, Inc., 565 U.S. 606 (2012). “[N]umerous courts have held that the inability 6 to recover monetary damages because of sovereign immunity renders the harm suffered 7 irreparable.” Odebrech Const., Inc. v. Sec’y, Fla. Dep’t of Transp., 715 F.3d 1268, 1289 (11th 8 Cir. 2013)); see also Feinerman v. Bernardi, 558 F. Supp. 2d 36, 51 (D.D.C. 2008) (“where, as 9 here, the plaintiff in question cannot recover damages from the defendant due to the defendant’s 10 sovereign immunity * * * any loss of income suffered by a plaintiff is irreparable per se.”). The 11 Defendants would be equally immune from damages in the California state courts: “a public 12 employee [who] acts in good faith, without malice, and under the apparent authority of an 13 enactment that is unconstitutional, invalid or inapplicable, * * * is not liable for an injury caused 14 thereby except to the extent that he would have been liable had the enactment been constitutional, 15 valid and applicable.” Cal. Gov’t Code § 820.6; see also id. § 815(a) (general sovereign immunity 16 for “public entity”).)

17 In short, because Plaintiffs’ members must choose between risking enforcement actions or 18 complying with an invalid law that requires them to alter their relationships with their workers and 19 incur significant costs, “a very real penalty attaches” regardless of how the members proceed. Am.
20 Trucking Associations, 559 F.3d at 1058. Plaintiffs’ members face a “Hobson’s choice”; they may 21 either continually violate the unlawful legislation and expose themselves to increasing liability—22 here including criminal penalties—or “violate the law once as a test case and suffer the injury of 23 obeying the law during the pendency of the proceedings.” Morales v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 24 504 U.S. 374, 381 (1992); see also Ex Parte Young, 209 U.S. 123, 145-46 (1908) (“officers and 25 employees could not be expected to disobey” state law imposing criminal penalties in order to test 26 its validity).

27 In either case, the irreparable harm is clear, and can be avoided only if enforcement of 28

1 AB 51 is preliminarily enjoined.

2 C. The Balance Of Hardships And The Public Interest Weigh Sharply In Plaintiffs’
3 Favor.

4 The inquiries into the balance of the hardships and the public interest merge where the 5 government is a party. Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009). Both factors strongly support 6 issuing a preliminary injunction.

7 Allowing AB 51 to go into effect would deprive businesses and their workers alike of the 8 many benefits of arbitration. The Supreme Court has repeatedly recognized that “enforcement of 9 arbitration provisions” yields “real benefits,” Circuit City, 532 U.S. at 122-23, including “lower 10 costs, greater efficiency and speed, and the ability to choose expert adjudicators to resolve 11 specialized disputes,” Lamps Plus, 139 S. Ct. at 1416 (quoting Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. AnimalFeeds
12 Int’l Corp., 559 U.S. 662, 685 (2010)); accord Allied-Bruce, 513 U.S. at 280 (one of arbitration’s 13 “advantages” is that it is “cheaper and faster than litigation”) (quotation marks omitted).

14 Arbitration is also procedurally simpler, which reduces the burdens on both parties.
15 Indeed, arbitration’s simplified procedures often allow individuals to proceed without a lawyer.
16 See, e.g., Johnston & Zywicki, supra, at 25-26. This aspect of arbitration is particularly beneficial 17 to employees with smaller claims, such as a dispute over a small amount of unpaid overtime. It 18 may not be cost-effective to pay a lawyer on an hourly or flat-fee basis to pursue these claims in 19 court, yet the small stakes would deter lawyers from agreeing to a contingency fee. And the 20 complexities of judicial litigation make effective pursuit of these claims on a pro se basis 21 impossible.

22 Again, a recent study demonstrated that, in cases decided on the merits, employees on 23 average recovered more—and in less time—than they did in court litigation. See NDP Analytics, 24 supra, at 5-10. Earlier scholarship similarly reports that employees succeed more often in 25 arbitration than in court. See David Sherwyn, Samuel Estreicher, and Michael Heise, Assessing 26 the Case for Employment Arbitration: A New Path for Empirical Research, 57 Stanford L. Rev.
27 1557, 1568-69 (2005) (observing that, once dispositive motions are taken into account, the actual 28 employee-win rate in court is “only 12% to 15%”) (citing Lewis L. Maltby, Private Justice:

1 Employment Arbitration and Civil Rights, 30 Colum. Hum. Rts. L. Rev. 29 (1998)) (of dispositive
2 motions granted in court, 98% are granted for the employer); Nat’l Workrights Inst., Employment 3 Arbitration: What Does the Data Show? (2004) (concluding that employees were 19% more likely 4 to win in arbitration than in court), available at goo.gl/nAqVXe.

5 The public therefore has a powerful interest in preventing businesses and their workers 6 from being deprived of the benefits of arbitration—all the more because those benefits are 7 protected under federal law.

8 In stark contrast to the irreparable injury that Plaintiffs’ members would suffer without a 9 preliminary injunction, Defendants will suffer no harm if one is granted. AB 51 is preempted by 10 the FAA, and the public interest is always served by enjoining the enforcement of invalid 11 provisions of a state law. As the Ninth Circuit has held, “it is always in the public interest to 12 prevent the violation of a party’s constitutional rights.” Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 13 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Sammartano v. First Jud. Dist. Ct., 303 F.3d 959, 974 (9th Cir. 2002)); 14 see also Utah Licensed Beverage Ass’n v. Leavitt, 256 F.3d 1061, 1076 (10th Cir. 2001) (public 15 interest favors preliminarily enjoining state statutes likely to be held unconstitutional); Chamber 16 of Commerce of U.S. v. Edmondson, 594 F.3d 742, 771 (10th Cir. 2010) (quoting Bank One v.
17 Guttau, 190 F.3d 844, 848 (8th Cir. 1999). The bottom line is that California has no valid interest 18 in evading federal law. Edmondson, 594 F.3d at 771.

19 In any event, enjoining AB 51 would not harm Defendants. If the statute were ultimately 20 found lawful, it could go into full effect when this case was over. And there is no urgent reason 21 why AB 51’s restrictions on arbitration agreements must go into effect immediately. For years, 22 California businesses have entered into arbitration agreements with workers in reliance on the 23 Federal Arbitration Act and Supreme Court precedent. A preliminary injunction would merely 24 result in “preservation of the status quo” until AB 51’s validity has been definitively adjudicated.
25 Coffman v. Queen of Valley Med. Ctr., 895 F.3d 717, 728 (9th Cir. 2018). Moreover, if any 26 particular arbitration agreement actually is unfair to workers, it can be invalidated under normal 27 unconscionability principles. See Kindred, 137 S. Ct. at 1426. In sum, the case for a preliminary 28

1 injunction here is compelling.

2

CONCLUSION

3 The Court should enter a preliminary injunction prohibiting Defendants from enforcing 4 AB 51 pending the completion of judicial review.

Case No. 2:19-cv-02456-KJM-DB

DECLARATION OF BRIAN MAAS IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

1 I, Brian Maas, hereby declare that:

2 1. I submit this declaration in support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Injunction.
3 I have personal knowledge of the statements in this declaration and, if called as a witness, I could 4 and would testify to their truth.

5 2. I am the President of the California New Car Dealers Association (CNCDA), a 6 501(c)(6) nonprofit corporation based in Sacramento, California. I have been an active member 7 of the California bar since 1988.

8 3. CNCDA is a member of the California Chamber of Commerce, one of the plaintiffs 9 in this matter.

10 4. CNCDA is the largest state automobile dealer association, representing more than 11 1,200 franchised new car and truck dealers throughout California. CNCDA members are primarily 12 engaged in the retail sale and lease of new vehicles, and also engage in automotive service, repair, 13 and part sales.

14 5. The core mission of CNCDA is to support and assist new car and truck dealers in 15 California in addressing economic and regulatory compliance issues relating to their businesses.
16 CNCDA focuses on protecting and promoting the interests of franchised new car dealers in 17 advocacy before all state government and regulatory agencies on issues that include labor and 18 employment, franchise laws, taxation, and environmental and safety regulation.

19 6. Many CNCDA members enter into binding predispute arbitration agreements with 20 their employees. In the experience of CNCDA members, arbitration resolves disputes fairly and 21 is much less expensive, adversarial, and burdensome than lawsuits in court. The resulting cost 22 savings may be passed on to consumers in the form of lower new vehicle prices.

23 7. CNCDA has supported the right of California employers to arbitrate disputes with 24 their employees, and specifically to make a predispute agreement to arbitrate a material term of 25 employment contracts. CNCDA supports arbitration as a means of dispute resolution because 26 arbitration is faster, cheaper, and just as fair as litigation in court, while also less likely to generate 27 hostility between the parties.

28 8. CNCDA includes an arbitration agreement as part of its employee handbook, which 1 each employee is required to sign to confirm the handbook's status as an agreement with CNCDA.

2 9. As part of its institutional support for employment arbitration, CNCDA opposed 3 AB 51, which was enacted by the California Legislature in 2019. AB 51 outlaws the inclusion of 4 an arbitration agreement as a material term of an employment contract, even if the employee or 5 applicant has the opportunity to opt out of arbitration.

6 10. Among the ways that CNCDA assists its members in labor and employment issues 7 is by providing form employment applications that, among other things, provide for the arbitration 8 of employment-related disputes. CNCDA also provides standalone arbitration agreements that are 9 designed to be included in a CNCDA member's employment agreement (including an agreement 10 in the form of an employee handbook).

11 11. The CNCDA form employment applications include a material term under which 12 the employee agrees to arbitrate workplace-related disputes. The standalone arbitration agreement 13 is generally presented as part of an employee handbook to which the employee agrees as a 14 condition of beginning or continuing employment.

15 12. Every year, CNCDA, through a forms company recommended by the Association, 16 distributes thousands of copies of its form employment application agreement to CNCDA member 17 dealers.

18 13. Many member dealers also incorporate CNCDA's standalone arbitration agreement 19 into their employment agreements.

20 14. AB 51 is explicitly intended to subject employers to civil and criminal penalties if 21 they offer arbitration agreements as a condition of employment (or application for employment), 22 whether the agreement to arbitrate is included as a material term of an employment agreement or 23 as a separate term providing the employee with the ability to opt out of arbitration.

24 15. In the absence of AB 51, CNCDA would continue to provide its form employment 25 agreement, including arbitration provisions, to its members as part of its core mission to assist 26 those members in complying with labor and employment laws as well as other regulations.

27 16. If AB 51 goes into effect, however, CNCDA members will no longer be able to use 28 those form agreements without risking civil penalties and criminal liability.

1 17. Although AB 51 purports to permit “voluntary” arbitration agreements, “voluntary” 2 is not defined (except to exclude agreements allowing employees to opt out of arbitration).
3 Because what a court will view as “voluntary” is especially uncertain in the context where an 4 employer presents an agreement to its employees, CNCDA considers the risk of criminal and civil 5 liability too high for members to safely rely on the voluntariness of the process.

6 18. CNCDA therefore has to choose between discontinuing an important service to its 7 members, or revising the form employment agreements that it provides.

8 19. Discontinuing the provision of form employment agreements would irreparably 9 impair CNCDA’s performance of its core mission by reducing the benefits and guidance available 10 to CNCDA members.

11 20. CNCDA would have to expend resources in notifying its members that the existing 12 form employment agreement could subject them to civil and criminal liability. The loss of those 13 resources also would be irreparable.

14 21. CNCDA members routinely rely on arbitration to resolve employment-related 15 disputes. Almost all these members either enter into arbitration agreements with their workers as 16 a condition of employment or allow workers to opt out of arbitration by taking some affirmative 17 step (such as providing the company with written notice).

18 22. In the absence of AB 51, CNCDA and its members would continue to rely on 19 arbitration agreements as part of their overall employment agreements.

20 23. If AB 51 goes into effect, however, CNCDA and those members will face a choice.
21 They either will have to continue to agree to arbitrate with new employees or employees whose 22 contracts are modified, and thus risk civil and criminal liability. Or they will have to change their 23 employment contracts—and avoid using any current form employment agreements including 24 arbitration provisions—in order to ensure compliance with AB 51’s prohibition on offering 25 arbitration as a substitute for judicial or administrative litigation.

26 24. CNCDA and those members will be irreparably harmed no matter what course they 27 choose.

28 25. They may continue using their current employment agreements for new employees,

1 and thereby risk civil and criminal enforcement actions.

2 26. They may incur the expense of creating or obtaining new employment agreements 3 and retraining their employees regarding dispute resolution for new employees. In that case, they 4 would have a two-tier workforce, where those employees hired before January 1, 2020, will be 5 subject to arbitration agreements, while those employees hired on or after that date will not be 6 required to arbitrate. And CNCDA and its members will lose the benefits of arbitration as a faster, 7 cheaper, and less hostile method of dispute resolution. These expenses and lost benefits, too, 8 would be irreparable.

9 27. Ultimately, if AB 51 goes into effect, CNCDA and its members would be deprived 10 of the benefit of predispute arbitration agreements. CNCDA and its members would experience 11 an immediate and irreparable increase in the costs of dispute resolution, as disputes that would 12 have been resolved fairly and efficiently in arbitration would instead end up in the slower and more 13 expensive court system.

14 28. In addition, each dispute would be more burdensome for CNCDA and its members 15 to resolve. In arbitration, proceedings are streamlined, culminating in a final hearing before the 16 arbitrator. By contrast, lawsuits embroil the parties in a lengthy and expensive discovery process, 17 and often involve multiple pretrial hearings and court appearances before the dispute ever becomes 18 ripe for trial. These additional proceedings often entail greater distractions for CNCDA's and its 19 members' staff, disrupting operations and increasing the members' cost of performing the tasks 20 that get vehicles to consumers. These harms, too, would be irreparable.

21 29. As noted above, the exception in AB 51 for "voluntary" arbitration agreements 22 between employers and employees is too vague and too risky to present a practical alternative, 23 especially in light of potential criminal liability should a court disagree that the contract formation 24 process was sufficiently "voluntary." It is entirely unclear how voluntariness would be proved, or 25 what circumstances surrounding the offering of an arbitration agreement to an employee would be 26 deemed sufficiently free of explicit or implicit coercion to make an agreement "voluntary" as a 27 matter of law so that voluntariness was an issue beyond the reach and unpredictability of a 28 factfinder.

1 30. As a consequence, CNCDA advises its members not to include arbitration 2 provisions in their employment applications and employment agreements unless and until a court 3 enjoins the enforcement of AB 51.

4 31. The attendant risks include any update to an employment agreement containing an 5 arbitration provision. The update in a modified or superseding agreement might effectively 6 invalidate an arbitration agreement that currently binds the parties.

7 32. If AB 51 goes into effect, CNCDA members are also likely to see a spike in 8 vexatious litigation. Some members of the plaintiffs' bar may encourage employees to file 9 meritless lawsuits against CNCDA members in the hope that the greater defense costs will coerce 10 the defendants to agree to a lucrative settlement even though a case lacks merit.

11 33. CNCDA members likely would have to pass some portion of these additional costs 12 on to consumers in the form of higher retail vehicle prices.

13 34. These severe harms to CNCDA and its members could not be remedied if AB 51 14 were declared unlawful at the end of this lawsuit. For example, CNCDA and its members would 15 never be able to recover the administrative costs of having different types of employment 16 agreements, the costs of abandoning arbitration, or the lower sales volume resulting from higher 17 prices.

18 35. Moreover, disputes that arise during the pendency of this action involving workers 19 who have not agreed to arbitration would already have been diverted into the judicial system.
20 CNCDA and its members would be unable to recover the greater costs of resolving disputes in the 21 court system that otherwise would have been resolved fairly and efficiently in arbitration or—in 22 the case of some meritless lawsuits—would never have been pursued at all.

23 36. In addition, some workers will no longer be working for the same business at the 24 conclusion of the litigation, making it too late to change the parties' legal relationship.

25 37. CNCDA and its members cannot avoid these harms by switching from predispute 26 to post-dispute arbitration agreements. In the experience of CNCDA members, employees are 27
28

1 highly unlikely to enter into an arbitration agreement after a dispute has arisen, even though 2 arbitrating the dispute would be far less expensive than litigating the dispute in court.

3

4 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

[PROPOSED] ORDER REGARDING PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

1 Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction came for hearing on January 10, 2020. All 2 appearances for the parties were noted on the record.

3 Upon reading and considering the motion, the supporting documents, the evidence 4 presented in support therefore, and the oral argument of counsel, the Court finds that Plaintiffs 5 have carried their burden of demonstrating that they are likely to succeed on the merits, that they 6 would be irreparably harmed in the absence of injunctive relief, that the equities weigh in favor of 7 granting the requested preliminary injunction, and that the injunction would not be against the 8 public interest.

9
10 Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary 11 injunction is GRANTED.

12 The Court orders as follows:

14 1. Defendant Xavier Becerra, in his official capacity as the Attorney General of the State 15 of California, Lilia Garcia Brower, in her official capacity as the Labor Commissioner of the State 16 of California, Julia A. Su, in her official capacity as the Secretary of the California Labor and 17 Workforce Development Agency, and Kevin Kish, in his official capacity as Director of the 18 California Department of Fair Employment and Housing are enjoined from enforcing AB 51, 19 pending this Court's final determination of the merits of Plaintiffs' claims.

21 2. There is no realistic likelihood of harm to Defendants from temporarily enjoining 22 enforcement of AB 51, so no security bond is required.

23 IT IS SO ORDERED.
