Fiduciary Fallout

MILLIONS OF REASONS TO PROTECT RETIREMENT SAVERS

America's retirement savers deserve a financial regulatory system that protects their long-term interests and ensures financial opportunity for anyone investing for their future.

New information from across the retirement savings landscape shows that the Department of Labor's (DOL) fiduciary rule is having harmful, unintended consequences.

The U.S. Chamber has committed to monitoring the rule's impact on investors and those saving for retirement. As part of this effort, the U.S. Chamber conducted a recent study of industry participants, including 14 financial advisory companies that are collectively responsible for nearly $10 trillion in assets and 26 million investment accounts. These initial results represent only a fraction of the market and confirm the need to act now to protect retirement savers.

CHOICES ARE BEING RESTRICTED

13.4 million
accounts face reduced choice of retirement savings products.

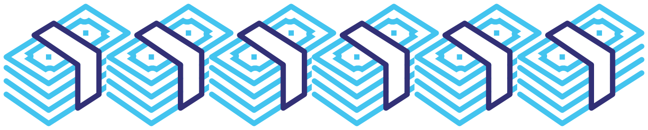
4.4 million
accounts have already had to be moved into a different service not requested by the investor.

FEES ARE RISING



6 million
accounts are facing the prospect of increased fees.

RETIREMENT SOLUTIONS ARE INCREASINGLY OUT OF REACH

100% of industry participants said the financial needs of small retirement savings investors will be worse served under the fiduciary rule.

DOL, THE SEC, AND CONGRESS NEED TO ACT NOW TO PROTECT SMALL RETIREMENT SAVERS.
