II. Background

Title IV of TSCA, 15 U.S.C. 2681 et seq., was enacted to assist the Federal Government in reducing lead exposures, particularly those resulting from lead-based paint. Section 402(c)(3) of TSCA specifically requires EPA to revise its Lead-based Paint Activities Regulations (Ref. 1), promulgated under TSCA section 402(a), to apply to those renovation and remodeling activities in target housing, public buildings constructed before 1978, or commercial buildings that create lead-based paint hazards. In April 2008, EPA issued the final Lead Renovation, Repair, and Painting (RRP) Rule under TSCA section 402(c)(3) (Ref. 2). The RRP Rule covers renovation, repair, and painting activities in target housing, which is most pre-1978 housing, and child-occupied facilities, defined in the rule as a subset of public and commercial buildings in which young children spend a significant amount of time.

Shortly after the RRP Rule was published, several lawsuits were filed challenging the rule, asserting, among other things, that EPA violated TSCA section 402(c)(3) by failing to address renovation activities in public and commercial buildings. These lawsuits (brought by environmental and children's health advocacy groups as well as a homebuilders association) were consolidated in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. EPA engaged in collective settlement negotiations with all the parties and on August 24, 2009, EPA entered into an agreement with environmental and children's health advocacy groups in settlement of their lawsuits (Ref. 3). Shortly thereafter, the homebuilders association voluntarily dismissed its challenge to the rule. As part of this settlement agreement, EPA agreed to commence rulemaking to address renovations in public and commercial buildings, other than child-occupied facilities, to the extent such renovations create lead-based paint hazards. As an initial step, EPA issued an ANPRM in the Federal Register on renovations in public and commercial buildings on May 6, 2010 (Ref. 4).

The settlement agreement has been amended and modified several times primarily to extend deadlines, with the most recent amendment having been entered into by the parties on September 7, 2012. Under the terms of the amended settlement agreement, the date by which EPA has agreed to either sign a proposed rule covering renovation, repair, and painting activities in public and commercial buildings, or determine that these activities do not create lead-based paint hazards, is July 1, 2015. If EPA publishes a proposed rule in the Federal Register, EPA agrees to take final action on or before the date 18 months after the proposed rule has published.

In addition, EPA agreed to hold a public meeting on or before July 31, 2013, and offer an opportunity for stakeholders and other interested members of the public to provide data and other information that EPA may use in making its regulatory determinations. With this document, EPA is providing advance notice that it plans to hold the public meeting on June 26, 2013, and will provide more information about the public meeting in a subsequent document it intends to publish in the Federal Register in the spring of 2013.

EPA also agreed to offer an opportunity for stakeholders and other interested members of the public to provide data and other information that EPA may use in making its regulatory determinations. This document, therefore, opens a comment period to allow the public to submit additional information and data pertaining to renovation, repair, and painting activities in and on public or commercial buildings. EPA plans to issue a discussion guide no later than 2 weeks before the public meeting. EPA expects the discussion guide to describe the information received during this comment period. Of particular interest to EPA for developing a proposed rule is information concerning:

1. The manufacture, sale, and uses of lead-based paint after 1978.
2. The use of lead-based paint in and on public and commercial buildings.
3. The frequency and extent of renovations on public and commercial buildings.
4. Work practices used in renovation of public and commercial buildings.
5. Dust generation and transportation from exterior and interior renovations of public and commercial buildings.

These topical descriptions offer only a short characterization of the information that EPA is interested in. The 2010 ANPRM contains a comprehensive history of this rulemaking and the lead program in general, a review of some of the relevant information EPA has already gathered and reviewed, and more detail on the information sought for the public meeting (Ref. 4).

EPA is seeking information from all sources and regarding all types of potentially affected businesses and other stakeholders, including small businesses. Information regarding work practices typically used by small businesses, as well as information on costs and other potential regulatory impacts on small businesses, particularly those that would uniquely affect small businesses, would be useful to EPA in developing any proposed rule for renovation, repair, and painting activities in and on public or commercial buildings.
